Graduate Year (e.g. G1): _____ Research Group: _____

Graduate students are paid by the CCB Dept. from September through June of the G1 year. Starting in July, advisors are responsible for paying the student's Research Assistant (RA) salary and a portion of the student's tuition, as set each year by CCB. Currently, the RA rate for G2's and above is $39,000 per year, and the advisor's portion of tuition is $8,652 per year (equivalent to the facilities fee set by GSAS). Advisors are responsible for this as long as the student is in good academic standing and remains in the advisor's lab.

All Chemistry and Chemical Physics students are expected to teach during the spring of the G1 year and during one term of the G2 year.

For students with fellowships, the above funding will be replaced by the fellowship support. If necessary, the fellowship will be supplemented up to the current RA rate from the advisor's funds. In the case of certain federal fellowships, this supplement will need to be paid from non-federal funds, due to federal regulations.

Note to external advisors: The academic requirements and financial practices of the CCB Department are operative rather than those from the Department of the advisor. External advisors must be approved by the CCB Director of Graduate Studies. Students who wish to join groups outside CCB must submit a 1-page summary of proposed research along with this form.

No firm commitment to accept a student into a particular Research Group can be made prior to December 10 2021
